

Photo of the Week: Ecuador is Home to the Famous Hammerhead Shark

Posted At : February 8, 2013 2:23 PM | Posted By : Yessenia Soto

Related Categories: Photo of the Week, Ecuador, ecotourism, Biodiversity, Galapagos, beach

Veá esta publicación en español.

Of the eight species of hammerhead shark that exist in the world, six are found in Ecuador. The scalloped hammerhead shark (Sphyrna lewini), is the most common in the country and the flagship species on the Galapagos National Park insignia.

This photo from Surtrek Ecuador & Galapagos Tours is proof of the overwhelming abundance of these remarkable animals in Ecuador. Surtrek offers cruises and diving excursions in places where hammerhead sharks usually appear and give the tourists a grand show.